WHITEPAPER

Changing the world by fighting back against financial abuse: Narcissist Token $NARC

Prepare yourself for a life changing experience as we introduce you to the most important crypto project of this century. Narcissist Token (NARC) has risen from the coming of narcissistic, toxic, and abusive personalities and political figures. You all know a narcissist or must deal with one at home or in your workplace. It's time to come together as a community and fight back against this plague. Now, we're here to bring this change with a very powerful tool: MEMES

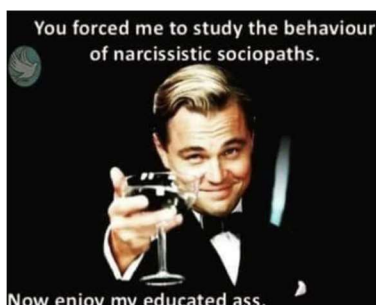

+ Our mission is clear: Empower everyday investors and disrupt the financial hegemony of the narcissists. Memes have the extraordinary power to unite, inspire, and challenge the status quo. They will be our weapon of choice. Through decentralized finance, we're creating a movement that puts financial control back into the hands of narc victims, where it rightfully belongs.

+ We're charting a course that can potentially make all narc victims and survivors successful. We're building and forging an unstoppable anti-narcissist community. Together, we'll establish a solid foundation, launch our token with a thunderous bang, and aim for unprecedented growth and market capitalization, giving everyone the financial freedom to fight back and defend themselves against narcissistic financial abuse.

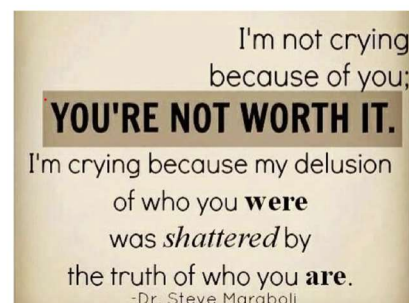

+ This journey isn't about financial gains alone, it's about reshaping the world for the victims and survivors of narcissistic abuse, with unity, and the formidable strength of memes. Victims of physical, psychological, emotional, financial, and verbal abuse should join us and get involved as we redefine what it means to be a part of the financial world, the one usually controlled by the narcissists. Together, we'll create a future where human beings with empathy triumph, where community breaks down barriers, and where unity and solidarity propels us to unimaginable heights and accomplishments.

+ With the enabling power of NARC Token (NARC) leading the way, there's no limit to what we can accomplish, and change the lives of every victim of abusive behavior. Get ready to embrace the power of memes and let's rewrite history together. One where justice, empathy, and compassion rules.

Today, we fight back!

Arguing with a
Narcissist
is like getting arrested.
Everything you say
can and will be used against you.

Fight back Financial Abuse with Financial Freedom

Financial abuse from a narcissist can take many forms and varies depending on the type of narcissism. Here are some very common examples of how a narcissist can abuse his victims:

- 1) Limit or restrict access to money, credit cards and other financial resources
- 2) Control access to all bank and financial institution accounts
- 3) Force the victim to deposit all earnings and savings in a joint account
- 4) Drain funds from joint accounts, ignoring rules and budgets previously discussed
- 5) Siphon money from family accounts
- 6) Set up the victim to ask permission for spending, or make them beg for money, even when it comes to necessities
- 7) Engage in secret financial activities, open secret bank account, and manipulate bank statements
- 8) Stay very secretive or vague regarding their finances
- 9) Distort all financial information
- 10) Undervalue assets or hide them to minimize their financial obligations
- 11) Resort to fraud and tax evasion schemes for personal gains
- 12) Embezzle company funds
- 13) Steal money from family members, friends, and relatives
- 14) Insist on managing solely all financial affairs
- 15) Blow away the money allocated to their own children's college fund
- 16) Spend mercilessly for their personal needs and skimping on basics and essentials
- 17) Give an allowance to the victim or put them on a tight budget without their input
- 18) Persuade the victim to taking on debt solely for the narcissist's benefit
- 19) Refuse or purposely forget to pay bills
- 20) Leave the victim solely responsible for the financial burden of shared expenses
- 21) Be highly critical of the victim's spending habits
- 22) Blame the victim for poor spending habits while deflecting their own expenditure
- 23) Manifest contempt, disapproval, rage and threaten over victim's financial decisions
- 24) Appropriate any money and gifts to the victim
- 25) Take out a loan or credit card in the name of the victim without their knowledge or consent
- 26) Open credit accounts in their children's name without their consent or knowledge
- 27) Max out credit cards behind the holder's back
- 28) Intentionally damage the victim's credit score
- 29) Show generosity with money mostly in public to impress, and cheapness in private to control
- 30) Expect financial compensation for any favor rendered
- 31) Always expect something in return for their financial support
- 32) Make one-sided money decisions
- 33) Manipulate the victim's perception of financial reality
- 34) Inflict a feeling of poverty
- 35) Withhold funds and child support payments
- 36) Demand money in the name of child support
- 37) Conveniently lose their job or find a new job that pays under the table to avoid paying child support
- 38) Deny access to shared assets

- 39) Undermine deliberately any form of financial stability
- 40) Sabotage their victim's effort to work, earn an income or pursue financial independence
- 41) Discourage any career advancement and job or educational opportunities
- 42) Pressure the victim to quit their job or to stop pursuing a higher education, and shame them for it
- 43) Limit the victim's ability to earn an income
- 44) Belittle the victim's professional accomplishments or taking full credit for it
- 45) Coerce the victim into signing over property or to transfer funds
- 46) Sell the victim's property or assets without permission or knowledge
- 47) Weaken the victim's ability to focus and concentrate during work hours
- 48) Instill doubt in the victim's financial abilities
- 49) Constantly move around who gets what in terms of money in a will or trust
- 50) Deprive family members of inheritance
- 51) Refer to money as the sole indicator of love and success
- 52) Demand or withhold sex for money
- 53) Use money as a reward or punishment to force the victim to comply to their demands or submit to their control
- 54) Destroy the victim's property and/or personal belongings with high sentimental value
- 55) Refuse to pay for any damages caused, instead shaming the victim for pushing them to react strongly
- 56) Remind their victim repeatedly of everything they do for them regarding money
- 57) Rescind on promises made involving money

Money is the most powerful tool that a narcissist has in his arsenal to maintain power and control over their victims. It's important to note that financial abuse is a meticulously thought-out process, progressing very subtly and gradually over time, and starting only once the narcissist has its target's full trust. Victims then mistakenly identify narcissistic controlling behaviors regarding finances as interest, love, and support. As the relationship evolves, the financial abuse undoubtedly worsens. Occasionally, narcissists will make some nice and generous gestures. But don't be fooled! This is not simply to look good. The objective of alternating between noteworthy and coercive behaviors is only meant to confuse more and more the victim, assert constant control, and ensure narcissistic supply. Ultimately, the narcissist aims to make its victim financially dependent, disabled, and drained, making it hard for the victim to leave or abandon the narc, thus limiting the options to save oneself. The dollar amounts may vary from one narcissist to the other, but at the end of it all, the financial imprisonment remains the same.

It's not as obvious in real life as it seems reading about it.

Breaking Free

Financial freedom means the world to the trauma-bonded victim. Here are a few examples of what the victim should do to break free from the toxic environment and financial abuse but lacks the money to do it. The victim should:

- 1) Save money to manage the ongoing relationship or plan an exit
- 2) Remove all financial obstacles to help end the toxic relationship and start a healing journey
- 3) Start to live independently
- 4) Access and be able to afford professional help and support resources
- 5) Focus on healing and recovering from trauma of narcissistic abuse
- 6) Escape to a hotel, family member, or move out of the house permanently
- 7) Build financial independence and stability
- 8) Negotiate installments to repay debts to improve credit score
- 9) Secure a job and/or invest in a side hustle to increase revenues
- 10) Open a separate bank account, apply for credit card and/or get a loan
- 11) Guarantee safe and stable housing
- 12) Provide for the children basic needs (food, clothes, medical needs, education, and protection)
- 13) Hire a knowledgeable lawyer and/or trusted financial advisor
- 14) Seek shelter and/or legal assistance
- 15) Fight for custody, child support arrangements and/or fair settlement after divorcing
- 16) Alleviate daily financial struggles
- 17) Take time off work
- 18) Develop a support network and coping strategies
- 19) Reduce symptoms of stress, anxiety, and depression
- 20) Regain self-confidence, self-esteem, and a sense of control and self-worth
- 21) Ensure physical and emotional well-being of themselves and the children

Without money, victims cannot escape toxic relationships. The trauma-bonded victim desperately needs money for all steps from survival to healing and moving on. This is the reason behind the creation of Narc Token: Helping victims navigate the damaging effects of narcissism and survive narcissistic abuse by giving them the means to afford a better and brighter future.

15 SIGNS YOU'RE A NARCISSIST

1. You're a bad sport. Some narcissists are bullies and tend to be both sure losers and sure winners. For example, when they lose in a sports match, they might try to humiliate the referee. When they win, they might gloat excessively. 	2. You always feel underappreciated. "Grandiose" narcissists always hold a grievance against the world. They typically feel entitled to something better and think they're not getting the recognition they deserve from others. 	3. You think everyone is stupid. Many narcissists are know-it-alls, and have a hard time getting along with people because they refuse to believe they could possibly be wrong about anything. They have a "my way or the highway" approach to decision-making.
4. You often swear at people. A Washington University in St. Louis study found that subjects who scored higher in narcissism are argumentative and curse more than their modest counterparts. 	5. You're self-righteous. Narcissists often believe their views are inherently superior to other people's perspectives. But what they truly value is the attention and acknowledgment they receive for holding those views. 	6. You feel justified being mean. "Vindictive" narcissists generally know vengeful or antisocial behavior isn't acceptable. But they feel okay about acting that way because they constantly feel they've been wronged.
7. You enjoy leading others. Narcissists typically enjoy leadership positions since they are able to dominate others and fulfill their need for constant positive reinforcement. 	8. You're an entertainer. "A narcissist monk would not be good, but to be Kanye West and a narcissist is fantastic," said University of Western Sydney psychologist Peter Jonason, an expert on social psychology. 	9. You hate having to feel emotion. Feeling an emotion "challenges their sense of perfect autonomy" says Harvard Medical School psychologist Craig Malkin. As a result, narcissists tend to change the topic of conversation when feelings come up.
10. You're likely young and male. After 34,653 face-to-face interviews, psychologist Frederick Stinson found that men tend to be more narcissistic than women across their lifespans. Narcissism is believed to peak during adolescence. 	11. You're regarded as attractive. Narcissists are generally rated as more stylish and physically attractive, according to a study conducted by Simine Vazire, a psychologist at Washington University. 	12. You're a bad listener. A University of Texas at Austin study found that narcissists typically prefer to keep the conversation centered on themselves, "making exaggerated hand movements, talking loudly, and showing disinterest by 'glazing over' when others speak."
13. You're a serial romantic. "Seductive" narcissists fall in and out of love quickly and easily, often with people they don't know very well. Until reality sets in, they think their partner is absolutely perfect — a complement to their own perfection. 	14. You cheat in relationships. Narcissists are more likely to cheat once they think their partners are committed. They also seem to get a rush out of convincing others to engage in promiscuous sexual acts that they normally do not participate in. 	15. You always have to be in control. Narcissists are more likely to control people with disapproving glances, calls to change plans, and chronic lateness. This allows them to undermine other people's ability to make choices and maintain their sense of total autonomy.
